Rajiv Satyal is a Los Angeles-based comedian. His TV-clean act has made him one of the most versatile comedians working today. Satyal earned his B.S. in Materials Engineering from the University of Cincinnati, co-opting as an engineer at Wright Patterson Air Force Base and Johnson & Johnson; he even interned on Capitol Hill for a summer. Satyal worked for six years at the world headquarters of Procter & Gamble in Brand Management, media, and purchasing. Immediately following that, Satyal moved to Los Angeles, where he was Brand Manager of FIJI Water. Since 2006, he has been a full-time standup comic, host, and speaker. Satyal has some interesting claims to fame: He has opened for Russell Peters more than any other Indian comedian. He even hosted Dave Chappelle's very first show after his much-publicized African hiatus. Satyal co-created the world-touring Make Chai Not War, a Hindu/Muslim stand-up show. The U.S. State Dept. sponsored it, sending it to seven cities in India. The show became part of the Congressional Record after being mentioned on Capitol Hill to Secretaries of State Hillary Clinton and John Kerry. Satyal has done stand-up at more than 100 colleges. He has recorded 130 episodes of his podcast, The TanGent Show, and has interviewed everyone from Deepak Chopra to Seth Godin to Preity Zinta.
